LOUIE AND I.

If I had been the least bit pretty I shouldn't have been surprised at it all; or if I had even been bright and witty; but such a little simple simpleton as I?

I never in all my life had the least expectation of lovers, or of any sort of admiring glances; and I never had any. And sometimes mother used to say she guessed it was just as well; for if she had to dress two girls out for their pretty looks, as she did one, it would have beggared her. Mother only had a little money, just barely enough to live on, and some of the principal going every year; but it wouldn't have been in human nature, having a daughter as pretty as Louie, not to want her to have the best that would set off her peach bloom beauty; and for my part I never grudged Louie a rose or a ribbon. I couldn't have worn them; for I was far too proud to try to do what nature hadn't, or to pretend I thought such things became me; and I liked my print dresses and plain collars better for myself.

But when Louie was dressed in her muslins till she looked like one of the old fashioned blush roses, so white without and so delicately flushed within, her lovely yellow hair breaking out in sunny curls all over her head, and she all radiant, as you might say, with her skin, her teeth, her great blue, beaming eyes—then I used to like to look at her as much as any of her lovers did, look at her as I would at any lovely picture; and she always turned from her gayest scene, the dear little person, to give her sweetest smile to me.

So when Dennis began all at once to come to our house, as if he had just seen Louie for the first time in his life, I was only delighted. For every one that knew him loved and honored Dennis Reed, who was the soul of all integrity; and if he wasn't a beauty himself, he was a stalwart son of Saul, and had the nicest little place in the region, a cottage up a lane, over looking the river, and with a woods behind its orchard and across the railway cut to keep off the east wind, if the east wind could ever blow in that sunny nook, with a garden spot made and blooming in every cranny of the rocks around it.

But my first thought was none of that, only that I liked Dennis Reed so much I liked to have him feel how lovely Louie was; I liked to have him come to see her; I liked to think her as safe with such a sweet, strong soul as I fancied his to be and last of all, I thought how pleasant was the home he had to give her, and it pleased me to place Louie there, in my thoughts, among all the rocks and flowers, looking out upon the river.

Not that it made any odds to Dennis what I thought about it all. I doubt if in those days he knew any more than that I existed, going his happy way with his head in the clouds, and eyes and heart only for his love.

So he married her and took her away, and a happier nest of singing birds than that in the cottage among the rocks and flowers could nowhere have been found, unless it were in my own heart, at the sight of the happiness there.

But then mother fell sick, and it took all my time to care for her; and I couldn't go up to Louie's very often, for I had every thing to do at home and was tired out by nightfall and often up half the night besides. Louie couldn't very well come down often and if she had come she wouldn't have known what to do. Poor mother! Once, I remember, she said to me, "I don't know but its more satisfactory to have one daughter plain than anything else." And it made my heart bound. And then I reproached myself for myselfishness in caring to hear her say that over Louie's head, as it were; but I remember it long afterward, and sometimes it used to give me a throb of joy when everything was dreary and I seemed to be alone in the world.

For mother died presently. And then it turned out that she had been living on her little property more than we had dreamed, and Louie's outfit and her long illness and bills had used up her money. And when everything was paid, there was only enough left for me to hire one room as a sort of refuge when I came home at night from working at my trade, for I had quite a knack at dressmaking. I did not put on mourning; for I was glad that mother was out of pain, and I was glad that she was gone before she knew that all the property was gone, and she, with her proud spirit, would have had to be dependent. But Louie did—and oh! what a beauty she was, with her black crapes falling around her, so waxy, fair and rosy and transparent! Of course she didn't miss mother the way I did. How could she, with Dennis waiting on her every wish? And she didn't seem to want anybody but Dennis, either; so I didn't see a great deal of her, only when she had something new to make up, or something old to alter over; and then she and Dennis were out, most of the time, strolling along the rocks or planting a new flower garden, or she was going to meet him coming from his work or running into the next neighbor's across the pasture, and I had almost nothing of her, except at trying-on times. And I will confess that trying-on times were trying times, and no wonder. For if you had such a perfect little figure as Louie had, you would want your dress to look as if you had been melted and poured into it, too. I used to wonder at Louie then, a little sometime; not for not sitting at home sewing and helping me in the work, because you might as well have asked a humming bird to do that; but for not taking more interest in the house and keeping things [illegible]. And I used to be afraid that if I were Dennis, and there were holes in my socks, and half the buttons off my clothes, and my coat and hat never brushed, and I came home and found nothing for dinner—not even the cloth laid—and my wife off enjoying herself somewhere else, and the dust everywhere so that I could write my name, that I shouldn't feel recompensed for all that by having my wife stroll round hanging on my arm, looking as pretty as a new blown rose. And yet, although the house must often have been thoroughly uncomfortable to Dennis, he never gave a sign that it was not Paradise itself; and I came to the conclusion that he didn't really miss those other things, and was satisfied with what he had.

I used to go up in the Eden sometimes, without being sent for, and mend up everything, and put the whole house straight; but I couldn't go so very often, on account of my work; and, besides, I had a sensation of intruding where two people wanted but each other.

But at last the babies came; and then I had to go. And Louie was wild with delight, and insisted on having them laid on the pillow close to her cheek, and talked and laughed and cooed and cried to them with such glittering eyes and dazzling color in her face, and said it was all she wanted, even if she were in Heaven to-morrow!

"But your husband, Louie!" I exclaimed.

"Oh! husbands are all very well." she said. "But I haven't been such an awfully good wife. You'd have made Dennis a great deal better wife, dear, for the matter of that. But my little sons! Oh! I know I could be a good mother!"

She was in Heaven to-morrow, the dear little innocent soul, and one of the babies went with her.

I was glad that the little baby went too. For I remember that she had said then she would have all she wanted; because it troubled me to think that, for all his grief to-day, Dennis wouldn't be like any other man in the world, if he didn't marry to-morrow; and the other wife would have the long life with him, and become dearer and dearer, and Louie would fade into just a beautiful dream; and, when the next life came, it would be the dear wife of the long continuing time that would be all alone if it wasn't for the baby, and she had said that the baby was enough. Of course all this was only a sort of flash through my consciousness, not any deliberate thought. Nobody could have thought about anything of the kind who saw Dennis' grief. He was all beside himself. I don't like to tell you what he said and did; I was half afraid sometimes that a thunderbolt would fall and destroy him; and then again I was afraid that he would destroy himself. I don't know how we ever contrived to get him to let Louie be placed in her casket, and I thought he would jump into the very grave itself. But at last that agonizing time, every moment of which knows how to give a fresh stab, was over, and the worse time came of the absence and silence, and wild, vain, bitter longing. And Dennis could'nt look at the baby. "Take it away!" he said. "It killed her!" So I took him into my own room, and cuddled him close to my heart every night, and every night, and every morning he awoke me with his laughing and gurgling and crowing, playing with the shadows of the dancing leaves across the bed and he had Louie's yellow hair and rosy cheek and perfect features, her great, longing blue eyes and Dennis' black eyebrows; and every day he grew dearer and dearer, and more inexpressibly dear, and I said to myself that, much as I missed poor Louie, here had been made up to me all I had failed of in my life; for this child was to take the place to me of mother and sister and husband and child altogether. And the dearer he grew, the more angry I became with Dennis for his indifference; and one day, when the boy was about four months old, I said to Dennis:

"I think you had better let old Nancy come in again and do your chores, the way she used to do, and I will go away and take the baby——"

"Take the baby?"

"Certainly," I said. "You can't bear the sight of him, and I love him. And then if you ever marry again"——

"I shall never marry again," he said, the gloom settling in his eyes.

"I don't believe you will!" I exclaimed. "I don't believe there's the woman living who will ever take such an unnatural, wicked father for her husband! Louie's own child, too, and the very image of her. I wonder what she'd think of you!" And I snatched the baby up out of the cradle, and ran from the room, lest I should break out crying before his face.

The next afternoon when Dennis came in from his work he went and [illegible] clothes, and came down to where I stood in the side door with the baby in my arms, looking at the sunset. And he stooped to take the child; and the little darling turned, with a low, frightened cry, and hid his face in my neck. And then, all at once the tears that I had not seen Dennis cry in all this time, gushed out, and he put his arms around the child, who began to scream with terror, and as I half turned and maintained my own hold, he took him forcibly away from me. "Let go!" he said, in his low half smothered tone. "He's my child!"

"I supppose he is!" I cried. "By some wicked form of law, the cruel law that men made for men. But you don't deserve him. You helped him to life, but I should like to know how much life he would have now, if it had rested with you?"

I never was so angry. I thought I would take my things and go away that moment. But how could I leave the baby? His little screams were torturing me then. I sat down on the doorstone and flung my apron over my head, and put my thumbs in my ears, and wished the baby and I were dead along with Louie.

Perhaps, it was an hour afterward when I looked up, and there was Dennis coming through the orchard with the baby, and the boy was crowing and jumping and catching at the bending boughs, and catching at his father's great mustache, and rubbing his little wet lips all over Dennis' face, chirruping and joyous; and I couldn't help it, I ran to meet them.

"You see," said Dennis, as he let me have him back, "blood is thicker than water, after all."

Oh! what a long journey I felt as if that baby had been on as I took him and could hardly have done kissing him.

"Come," said Dennis, laughing, "leave something of him for me."

It was the first time he had laughed since the child was born. And the darling had gone a long journey—a journey into the infinite depths of a father's heart.

Well, after that, Dennis couldn't get home early enough in the afternoon, and it seemed as if he hated to go away in the morning, and Sundays he had the baby in his arms from morning till night. And in the evening when I sat sewing on the little clothes, he would come and sit opposite, or where he could see how the work went on; and he brought home all sorts of little impossible toys, and he talked and sang to him, and walked with him; and the baby began to look out for his coming as much as I did. And all that, of course helped me a good deal in my work about the house, for I kept everything as fine and orderly as a honeycomb; only, with the baby to tend and see to, I sometimes had to sit up nights to do it.

"I shall call him Louis, for his mother," said Dennis, one night.

"Do you think you can bear it?" I asked.

"To hear him called Louis? Yes. He is Louie over again," said Dennis.

And I couldn't tell you how pleasant life grew to be as we watched the child grow, unfolding like a rose. There was absolutely a sort of rivalry between us presently as to who should discover his first tooth. When he took his first step, it was between Dennis' arms and mine, as we both sat on the floor. And when he spoke his first word, how we listened to learn if it were Dennis' name or mine. The day wasn't long enough to watch his dear loveliness in. And I think Dennis was envious of me for having him nights; but he could not help that.

I never shall forget, though, the night the baby had the croup, and we both hung over him, fearing every breath would be the last; and, when ease came, how we both broke down and cried together; and as we looked out the window and saw the first flush of dawn, and the shining moon and the morning star glittering out of it with ineffable brightness.

So time went on; and I thought then it would not be easy to see how we could be happier; for even the memory of Louie was softened into something that was hardly a grief to us in our love of her boy, though sometimes I used to wonder if the little fellow that went with her was as sweet as the one that staid with us.

But when the dear child was about 3 years old, there came a snake into Eden. A snake? A whole nest of them! It seemed as if every girl in the whole village had just found out what a rare and charming person I was, and how pleasant it was late afternoons up where I lived, and how nice it was to run up evenings to see me. And sometimes Dennis would have to go home with them; and sometimes he wouldn't, but just went out the other way, and never came home till they'd almost [illegible]. I couldn't say why it worried me—I only knew it did. And I used to take the boy and go off by myself and cry. For of course, sooner or later, Dennis would marry some one of those terrible girls; he couldn't help himself; it would come about after a while as naturally as water runs down hill.

And then there would be a stepmother for my boy and Heaven only knew what would become of him. And what would become of me?

And by this I gave out completely. I should see Dennis no more. No more of that dear voice and presence, and cheery way of his. And all at once it came over me, in a flash of horror and shame, what was the matter with me; and then I felt that happen what would, I really must go away.

But I couldn't go and leave the boy; and there I was. And I grew pale and could eat nothing, and was stiller and stiller every day. I could as soon have talked Hebrew as have smiled.

But one day I had the little fellow asleep in his morning nap, which he had not quite outgrown, although it was getting to be short and fitful; and, thinking that Dennis was there to see, or knowing he was, and thinking nothing, I went out by myself, down the field by the railroad cut; for there was an apple tree there where I gathered the windfalls, and I liked, too, to sit on the bank and see the train dash in the cut. I had my apron full of apples, and as I came back, I stood loitering a moment or so on the steep bank, hearing a train coming, and liked all the rush and roar and rattle that seemed to snatch me out of myself, as if it told of a way to somewhere, some distant region where my trouble might be forgotten; and all at once another sound from that of the approaching train caught my ear, a glad, gay shouting and crying. I turned and looked to the right and left, a little confused, for it was the child's voice. And, turning back suddenly, I saw him; and there, at the foot of the bank, in the very centre of the railway track stood the little fellow, who had crept from his bed and ran after me, and been beguiled down the slope by some blossoms that he saw there—there, in the centre of the track he stood, waving his little hands and shouting to the coming train. There was not a half minute time, it seemed; but in less time I was down there, and was just grasping the child when my foot slipped, and I fell with him in my arms, and the thunder was in my ears and the hot breath in my face, and I knew that was the end.

No; it was only the beginning of the end. When I knew anything more I was lying on the bank in Dennis's arms; for he had come bounding after the boy, and had snatched us both out of danger as the engine, like a wild dragon, whizzed and roared and thundered by, and he was holding me as if he would never let me go.

And he never has let me go. "Oh!" he cried, "I found out in that second what life would be to me without you, dear; something I couldn't bear a day." And I only clung to him, too ashamed to let him see my face, too tired and weak to lift it. And so it is I that am the second wife, and the boy's mother. And I suppose everybody was surprised; but nobody, as I told you, was half as much surprised as I.—HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD in the Independent.

Novel Bookkeeping.

Peculiarities of a Woman Shown in Her Expense Accounts.

It is a touching sight to see a woman begin to make up her expenses, having firmly resolved to put down every cent she spent, so as to find out how to economize and find out where all the money goes. Procuring a small book, she makes a due entry, and on Monday after the first Saturday in which her husband brings home his pay she carefully tears the margin of a newspaper and with a blunt pencil strikes a trial balance something in this way: John brought me home $48.49 and $1.43 I had is $49.93 and $1.09 I lent Mrs. Dixon is $50.93, but hold on, I ought not to enter that, because when she returns it it'll go down. That was $49 93, and what have I done with that? Then she puts down the figures, leaving out the items to save time—a process that enables her to leave out the most of the items to where a round sum is involved, on the supposition that they have already been put down. As this: Six dollars and fourteen cents for meat, and 10 cents for celery, and 10 cents on the new street car line, and a bad five cent piece I got in exchange, and $2.81 I paid the milkman—who owes me 19 cents—that's $3.00, and 15 cents at church, and the groceries—they were either $15.60 or $16.50 I forget which, but I guess it must have been $15.60 for him a dime he would give me half a dollar which would make even change and I couldn't, because the smallest I had was a quarter—and $2.75 for mending Kate's shoes, which is the last money that shoemaker ever gets from me, and 10 cents for celery—no, I did put that down. Finally she sums up her trial balance sheet, and finds that it foots up $64.28, which is about $15 more than she had originally. She goes over the list several times and checks it carefully, but all the items are correct, and she is just about in despair when her good angel hints that there may be a possible mistake in addition. Acting upon the suggestion she foots up the column and finds that the total is $44.28 and that according to the principles of the arithmetic she ought to have $5.65. Then she counts her cash several times, the result varying from $1.40 up to $1.97, but then she happily discovers that she has been mistaking a $2 gold piece for a cent, and remembers that she gave the baby a trade dollar to cut its gums with. On the whole she has come within 86 cents of a balance, and that, she says, is close enough, and she enters in one line of her account book: "Dr.—By household expenses," so much; and is very happy till she remembers, just before going to bed, that she has omitted $2.75 for her husband's hat.

A Ghastly Fireplace.

A Southside physician has capped the climax of suggestions. He is something of an artist in modeling in clay, and after he got his office supplied with natural gas he made a cast of a skull. The thing is horribly natural, even to the sutures across the skull, and one front tooth knocked out. This is set up in the grate in such a way that the bluish crimson flames of the turning gas steal through the eyes and nostrils and flicker playfully around the ghastly jaws. Little jets of flame flash through between the sunken jaws and lighten up the bony countenance, heated to a white-red heat in a manner horribly suggestive of other fires, which are said to burn, but not consume.

Indians Dying by the Score.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 2.—Indians at Lesser Slave Lake are dying from starvation and pestilence. Over 150 died last month from measles, and the living are without fish and game.

Pretty Polly.

How a Smart Bird Exposed the Vanities of Society Life.

Apropos of parrots, the people who own them and are accustomed to their noise and contradiction are seldom disturbed by them, but it is far otherwise with the unhappy visitor who encounters them. A lady on Jefferson avenue who owns one of these silly pests was entertaining some callers the other day, when Polly struck into the conversation from her place of ambush. One lady had just remarked:

'So glad you were at home to-day, Mrs.——'

'That's a lie!' responded a hoarse voice.

The visitors started, but as their hostess seemed not to notice it, resumed the conversation.

'I saw Mr.—— and told him to—'

'Kiss me! kiss me! screamed Polly.

'—say that I would call soon.'

'You're another! Shut up!' yelled the parrot.

At this juncture the lady of the house observed how disconcerted her guests were, and, guessing at the cause, dragged Polly into sight. The mischievous bird did not utter another word until the ladies rose to leave, when they were most affectionate and profuse in their farewells. Polly balanced rapidly from one foot to the other, gave a series of smacks, and in a tone of complete disgust croaked:

'You make me sick!'—Detroit Free Press.

AN EXCITING RIDE.

A Doctor's Escape from What He Thinks Was an Attempt to Kill Him.

SLATINGTON, Pa., Feb. 3.—Last Monday night Dr. Joseph P. Engleman, an ex-member of the legislature from Northampton county, who lives at Cherryville, five miles from here, went to Walnutport to see a patient. He started home at a late hour, and while driving along a lonely road a person asked to ride to the next village. The doctor stopped his horse, and the person was soon sitting in the carriage beside him. In a short time the doctor discovered that his companion was a man in female attire. In order to avoid suspicion the doctor chatted pleasantly with the man, and during the conversation suddenly dropped his whip on the road. "I have just lost my whip," said the doctor. "Wont you please get it? My horse is at times unmanageable, and I am afraid to leave the carriage." Without suspecting the trick the man alighted to get the whip, at the same time saying: "Wait for me; don't drive off." Once out of the clutches of the unknown the doctor soon had the horse running at full speed and the man far in the rear. Just as the doctor was about to congratulate himself on his escape he found a lady's muff on the seat containing a loaded six-shooter, and a few minutes later met two more persons in female attire, both of whom gazed into his carriage as he approached them. The parties separated as he neared them, each taking a position on the sides of the road. Believing these people to be confederates of the man who got off after the whip, the doctor urged his horse, and was soon beyond their reach. The muff and revolver are still in the doctor's possession. The doctor is of the opinion that the parties saw him drive to Walnutport in the morning and waited for him to return, either for the purpose of robbing or assassinating him.

Northumberland Post-Office Burglarized.

NORTHUMBERLAND, Pa., Feb. 2.—The post-office in this place was burglarized this morning of $450 in cash and about $100 in stamps. The thieves pried the safe open with a wedge. When Postmaster John C. Forsyth arrived on the scene at 4 o'clock this morning he found the room full of smoke, and tracks in the new fallen snow about the door indicated that three men had been engaged in the job. Mr. Morgan who occupied rooms over the post-office, heard noise in the office, but supposed it was the postmaster and his assistants.

A Teacher's Cruelty.

TAUNTON, Mass., Feb. 2.—A young lady school teacher of Raynaham, belonging to Acushnet, punished a pupil, a seven-year-old son of F. L. Lowell, station agent at that place, for whittling a desk one day last week, by cutting the boy's thumbs with his own jack-knife. At first the teacher considered that she was justified, but she afterward apologized to the father, who caused her arrest. She was brought here, where friends adjusted the matter, and the case was placed on file. The father acknowledged satisfaction, the teacher paying the costs of the case.

H. Y. STITZER, Secretary. JAMES A. McCLAIN, Chairman.

IN the State Senate a unanimous resolution was passed last Thursday to submit the prohibition amendment to the people to decide the question by their ballots. The resolution also passed the House, on Tuesday, by a vote of 123 yeas, and 24 nays. Among the few democrats voting in the affirmative was Hon. Rhone from this county.

HON. LEONARD RHONE'S endeavors to induce the state legislature to request congress to amend the constitution so that the people shall elect U. S. Senators directly are entirely in accord with the wishes of a majority of the voting population. We have heard opinions expressed time and again by individuals and the press favoring the abandoning of the complicated electoral system and it is to be hoped that Mr. Rhone's efforts in this direction may be successful. There is no reason whatever why the offices of U. S. Senator and president can not be filled by direct ballots as well as many other important offices are.

PENSION bills of almost every description pass congress of late and if they would become laws it would reduce the surplus in the treasury to nothing in a very few years. One of these bills, known as the pauper pen-

Cleveland now for signature. He does not seem to be in a hurry about signing it either, because this bill puts deserters, bounty-jumpers and skulkers on a level with deserving soldiers and every true patriot hopes he will not sign it.

The surplus in the treasury might be utilized to much more advantage in appropriating several millions of it for the improvement of our very weak navy and thus provide some protection for our almost defenseless sea coasts.

As was expected President Cleveland signed the Inter-state Commerce bill last week and next in order will be the appointment of the commission which is to carry the provisions of the new law into effect. Like in all cases of the kind there are a multitude of candidates, almost every state in the Union having its man for the position. It is thought that two of the commissioners will be taken from New York and Pennsylvania, on account of the extensive railroad interests of these states. But the President intends moving very cautiously in the matter, because he considers the measure experimental and wishes to fill the places with the ablest men to be found in the country. Pennsylvania has its candidates and Christ Magee, of Pittsburg, is spoken of in Republican ranks as the most available man, while ex-Gov. Pattison is being mentioned by the other side.

GOVERNOR BEAVER has signed the magistrate's bill and Philadelphia politicians are consequently happy. That set of grasping office seekers have gained their point in the face of the opposition which the better political element exerted against this selfish measure. The Governor's signature of the magistrate's bill clearly defines his position in the administration of this commonwealth. He is in the clutches of the Republican ringsters who dictate when they want something done for their interest and the Republican governor must obey. This new measure creates four new magistrates in the city of brotherly love at an expense of $12,000 per year, to come out of the tax payers' pockets, notwithstanding that the present number of magistrates have not work enough to keep them employed regularly. But the Republican sharks wanted an office bad and they got it

The total number of immigrants who arrived in the United States last year was 386,755, against 326,151 in 1885.

THE annual financial statement of the commissioners of Centre county which made its appearance in supplement form last week is a very complete and comprehensive report of the receipts and expenditures for the year 1886. We invite the special attention of the taxpayers to the sixth column of the supplement where at the head appears the final statement of accounts with the county treasurer, which shows that there is a cash balance of $8986,77 in the treasury. Further down in the same column our readers will find the liabilities and assets, with a balance of $27,142.13 in favor of the county. With reduced taxes all the expenses of the county were paid, improvements were made and a formidable balance left to begin the new year with. If that is not, a very creditable showing of the efficient management of the financial affairs of the county by our board of commissioners then we should like to know what more could be asked in fairness and justice.

THE strike in New York continues with very little signs of abating. And that is not the worst of it. The influence of the action of the Knights of Labor Union spreads to other parts of the country. In several sections of Pennsylvania miners and factory employes await orders from headquarters to "go out" and thousands are ready to strike simply because they are Knights of Labor and are in sympathy with their brethren in New York. This is a deplorable state of affairs and an organization with such principles is injurious to the business interests of the country to the largest degree. Mayor Hewitt, of New York, in talking to a reporter the other day, about the present labor troubles expressed himself in the following decisive and pointed language:

"Any attempt to interfere with the commerce of this country is an offence against the Constitution and laws, and the whole power of the United States may be invoked to prevent any interference with the loading and unloading of vessels in the port. . . . The days of the Vehmgericht and of the Council of Ten were supposed to be purely historical, but here is an attempt at the close of the nineteenth century to restore the terrors of secret tribunals and blot out the rights of individual liberty established by the struggles of revolution and the sacrifices of the three centuries which have brought the world out of political darkness into the light of freedom. There is nothing American about this and it cannot last."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our regular correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7, 1887.

Congress is working away these days as though it realized the shortness of its life and the necessity of accomplishing much before the fourth of March. Various questions have been discussed in both the Senate and House during the past week, some important measures have been passed and others have become laws by receiving the President's signature.

The Beck bill as passed makes it unlawful for any Senator or Representative to accept employment as attorney-at-law or payment for services of any kind in opposition to the United States, in any case in which its interests may be concerned. Any member of either house of Congress who violates the provisions of this act may be punished by imprisonment not exceeding one year or by fine not exceeding $500, or by both.

Mr. Evarts went so far as to say that those lawyers in the Senate who would vote for such a bill would make the imputation against their profession that lawyers were a class to be taken out from the rest of the community, for fear they might be drawn over the line of their duty. The right of citizens was to be invaded because honest employment might lead to criminality.

All of Mr. Evarts logic was lost upon the Senate however, and refused by a vote of nearly three to one.

The President's approval of the Inter-State Commerce bill was in full accord with the opinion of Attorney General Garland, and with the views of the entire Cabinet. The next question is, who will he get to serve their country as commissioners under the new law and against railroad corporations. Among two or three scores of candidates Col. Morrison is oftenest mentioned as one of the number which will be appointed. He is quoted as saying lately that it is the only position under the Government which he desires.

Representative Reagan, who will come to the United States Senate next year as the successor of Mr. Maxy, of Texas, has long been identified with the Inter-State Commerce bill. He has contended for this legislation for many years, and his election may be accepted as an indorsement of his course. Judge Reagan, as the Senator elect is called, is a man of indefatigable industry, an assidous representative of the interests of his constituents, and is sure to make a good record in the Senate. He is well-known in Washington, having served four years in Congress before the war, and nearly twelve years since the war. During the war he was Postmaster-General of the Southern Confederacy.

The question of temperance has been creditably solved for herself by the mistress of the White House. When the Diplomatic Corps sat down to the President's dinner of state a few evenings ago, eight wine-glasses stood at every plate but that of Mrs. Cleveland, she took only water. This was not a criticism of the taste of her guests, but only an assertion of her own preference. It defined her personal status, and it discharged her official duty.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

Bushel for Bushel.

The Directors of the Northern Pacific Railroad have voted to invest $100,000 in seed wheat for the benefit of the farmers of Dakota west of the Missouri and eighty miles east of that river. Hail storms and drought destroyed the fall wheat crop in that section, and without such assistance as the Northern Pacific has decided to give them, the farmers would find themselves in a very tight place. In return for the seed wheat the farmers will return bushel for bushel out of the crop grown from it.

Deafness Can be Cured.

Deafness is caused usually by an inflamed condition of the mucus surface of the Enstachian Tube. This Tube is the channel of communication between the tympaneum and the upper part of the pharynx Thouber. Should this Tube become inflamed and closed up, Deafness is the result. If it is only partially closed, you have a rumbling sound or an imperfect hearing. There are two great causes for this: one is from taking a severe cold and the other from an impure condition of the blood, the consequence is that this tube has the Catarrh. Catarrh being nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surface. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucus surfaces of the system. We offer one hundred dollars reward for any case of deafness [caused by Catarrh] or a case of Catarrh that can not be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure.

How Roosters Bulldoze Grangers.

From the Harrisburg Star.

There is not the slightest doubt that the country members, as a rule, are intimidated into voting for measures which the "ringsters" approve. A representative from one of the country districts gave a sample of this "bulldozing" to the Star correspondent today. He had made up his mind not to vote for the bill giving the Traction Company, of Philadelphia, unlimited power. A Philadelphia member heard of this intention on the part of the representative from the rural district and approaching him said: "If you don't vote for the passage of this measure the local bill you have introduced will be defeated; the whole 'gang' will vote against it." The consequence was the country member voted for the Traction bill, and there were others who did the same under similar circumstances. "The country members want a leader," said a Representative from the interior of the State, "and with a fearless, brainy man at their head they can defy the bosses and vote as their conscience dictates."

Statistics as to Strikes.

Over 100,000 People Now Idle as Compared With 47,700 This Time Last Year.

Bradstreet's furnishes a new and fairly accurate report of (1) leading strikes begun in 1886 and unsettled on January 1 last; (2) all strikes in the United States begun during January, 1887, and (3) strikes announced during the first three days of February. It is ascertained that the total number of men on strike during January, 1887, was about seventy-eight thousand against 47,200 in January, 1886. Inasmuch as 9,000 men have struck since January 31 last, the comparison becomes 87,900 on strike since January 1, 1887, as compared with 47,200 in 1886. In addition to this total of men out of work, it is to be noted that 16,300 workers in fac- cause of the scarcity of coal or because of the lack of work caused by the strikes of others. This points to 104,000 industrial employes who have stopped work since January 1, as compared with 47,200 for a like period in 1886. There were eight strikes begun in 1886 carried over into the current year. These involved 5,000 men. Four have ended, two of them successfully, including 1,170 men, and two failing, involving 830 men. In January there were begun over 90 strikes by 73,000 employes. Of these 32 have ended, 22 of them involving 3,300 men, being successful, and 9 of them, involving 5,700 men, having failed. About 60 January strikes, therefore, remain unsettled. The 24 strikes reported for three days in February furnish a list of 9 900 men. None of these has been setttled.

TERRIBLE LOSS OF LIFE.

An Express Train Filled with Excursionists Bound for the Winter Carnival at Montreal Plunges Through a Bridge.

Dispatches received last Sunday by the associated press reported a terrible disaster of the Montreal Express at Woodstock, Vt. The train was loaded with passengers, mostly from Boston, who were on their way to the great Canadian winter carnival. Ira A. Chase, of Bristol, who went to the wreck shortly after the accident occurred gives the following account:

"The train left White River Junction late, and the accident is thought to have occurred at 2.15 a. m. A broken rail was discovered some 200 feet this side of the bridge, but whether this caused the accident or a wheel first broke is in doubt. The locomotive and baggage and mail cars crossed the bridge in safety. Two passenger coaches, the Boston sleeping car "Pilgrim" and the Springfield sleeper "St. Albans" went off the bridge at the end on the right hand side, and apparently turned bottom upward in the fall. Men living near by stated that when they got to the scene there was no fire except in the forward passenger car, but the flames soon spread to the other cars and then to the bridge. All were consumed."

Twenty-six persons so far as known were taken out alive from the cars which were burned. Two of these are understood to be Mr. Wesson, pistol manufacturer of Springfield, and Ed. Brocklebanks, a brakeman, but they died soon after. The two passenger coaches were well filled and every berth in the Boston sleeping car was occupied and twelve in one from Springfield, making the total number of passengers in the wrecked cars about eighty. This will probably make the number of dead between fifty and sixty. The bridge was between thirty and forty feet above the water, which was covered with thick ice, making it probable that death resulted from crushing and burning rather than from drowning. Several were penned in the wreck who might have been rescued alive but for the flames.

The bridge crossed the White river about four miles above the town of White River Junction, Vermont, and near the old unused station called Woodstock. It was a simple wooden truss structure, about 200 feet long, crossed diagonally twenty feet above the river. The road is the main line of travel between Boston and Montreal. The bridge was not considered in any way less safe than fifty other similar bridges in the rough and mountainous country through which the road passes.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 182 Fulton Street, N. Y.

Drowned at Clearfield.

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Feb. 8.—At 12.30 o'clock to-day, a 9-year old son of Alonzo Adams, of this place, was drowned in the Susquehanna river. He, with several other boys, was watching the ice as it moved down the stream when he slipped off the bank and was carried away by the current. He drifted on the surface for one-half mile, but the flow of ice and drift being so great it was impossible to render him any assistance. His body has not yet been recovered.

The Susquehanna at this point raised 11 feet above low water mark, the highest since 1865, but this evening is falling. No serious damage to property has yet been reported.

Good Thing for Teachers.

What a Prominent School Teacher Thinks of an Assembly Bill.

"What do you think of the legislative bill now pending requiring payment of teachers' salary while attending institute?" asked a Patriot reporter of a prominent male school teacher of Harrisburg. "It is an equitable measure and ought to pass," said he. "As it is now it has been found difficult to secure the attendance of teachers at the institutes in this city. If they were led to regard such attendance as part of their work, for which they were to be paid, it would doubtless have a good effect. I think the bill is designed more especially to apply to country schools. In country districts teachers who receive small pay—as most of them do—find that a week's attendance at an institute, which may be at some distant point, entails expenses that they are not able to stand. Another provision of the bill, requiring at least six months' school in every district, is also good. Six months are short enough for a term of school anywhere."

Creswell Lewis, M. D. Philadelphia.

AFTER DIPHTHERIA.—Diphtheria is a terrible disease, requiring the greatest medical skill to effect a complete cure. Even when its power is broken, it clings to the patient with great persistency, and often leaves the system poisoned and prostrated. Just here Hood's Sarsaparilla does a vast amount of good, expelling impurities from the blood, giving it richness and vitality, while it renovates and strengthens the system.

—Eml. Eungert, who lives on John Homan's farm, a few miles east of Aaronsburg, favored this office with a call on Tuesday afternoon. —The value of a printed envelope, that has your address or business card printed upon its surface, is evidently unknown to many people in this section. Eisenhuth can always be relied upon to carry in stock the purest and best goods, and sustain the reputation of being active, pushing and reliable, by recommending articles with well established merit and such as are popular. It will surely cure any and every affection of throat, lungs, or chest, and in order to prove our claim, we ask you to call and get a Trial Bottle free.

EXPERIENCE VS. INEXPERIENCE.—It is a matter of regret that in introducing Hood's Sarsaparilla, its proprietors are obliged to overcome a certain distrust by some people who have unfortunately bought worthless compounds mixed by persons ignorant of pharmacy. Messrs. C. I. Hood & Co. are reliable pharmacists of long experience, and they make no claims for Hood's Sarsaparilla which cannot be substantiated by the strongest proof. And we say to those who lack confidence, read the unsolicited testimonials in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and then prove its merits by actual personal test. We are confident you will not be disappointed, but will find it a medicine of peculiar curative value, which can implicitly be relied upon.

—The Clinton Democrat thus rectifies a wrong impression which seems to prevail about Gov. Curtin's eyesight which was recently restored: There is is one thing about the cure of Governor Curtin's eye. The impression is general that he was blind in one eye and couldn't see much out of the other, and that both eyes were completely cured, so that he could see as well as anybody. This was not correct. One of Gov. Curtin's eyes is a glass eye, and the other through sympathy was badly affected. It was this one eye that was cured by Dr. Loring, of Washington. Even the distinguished surgeon did not consider himself sufficiently skillful to restore sight to the glass eye.

—Another of those transitory stores has opened in Musser & Smith's corner building on Man street by Angstadt & Co., gentlemen hailing from Lewisburg, we believe. We are told that the town council will make an ordinance which will after this impose a license fee on these short-lived establishments and we think that to be a very proper move. A business firm of that kind will snatch away a large amount of trade from our home merchants and at the same time is of no benefit to the interests of the community, and consequently should be taxed for the privilige of doing such quick and profitable business.

THE Most Remarkable Case of all.—A gentleman writes us from Philipsburg, Centre Co., Pa., that his little girl was horribly afflicted with scrofula. Her body was full of sores, ears discharging continually thick yellow purid matter, and her eyes so swollen and inflamed as to be almost blind. One bottle of McDonald's Blood Purifier has to all appearances entirely cured her. Our neighbors, as well as ourselves, consider the cure remarkable.
A bonafide case. The address of the family can be obtained from the editor of this paper.

—Already we are reminded that next fall will be the election for county officers by the fact that candidates are looming up in different sections of the county. For the office of Register we see the name of G. W. Rumberger, commissioners' clerk, mentioned. For Recorder, our townsman, D. L. Zerby, has concluded to be a candidate. Mr. Zerby has many claims upon his party as a consistent and working Democrat, while as a man and scholar he is particularly fitted for the office. He does not expect to make a personal canvass of the county in a way that candidates for county offices are wont to do, but intends to let the voters know his candidacy by means of publication and then leave the result with the good will of the Democratic party.

LAST CONVENTION OF THE SEASON.—The musical convention at Aaronsburg is a thing of the past and that winds up the season for such gatherings. The attendance at the convention was unusually large and it was consequently a financial success. The coffers of the Reformed Ladies' Mite Society treasury are well filled and the ladies are in the best of humor. Musically the affair was also a success. Prof. W. C. Moyer, of Freeburg, who wielded the baton as conductor, is a very pleasant and talkative gentleman and at the same time a good musical instructor. He was ably assisted by Miss Moyer, the organist, and Calvin & Cyrus Moyer accompanied the choruses on their cornets. There were a number of prominent musicians present, such as Profs. Bierly, King and Lowell M. Meyer, the latter favoring the large audiences in the concerts with his select and most popular songs. Neighboring News.

AARONSBURG.

Thunder showers on last Wednesday and Thursday.

The Reformed Ladies Mite Society's Musical Convention was a success. The concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings were largely attended. The gross receipts will figure up close to $140.

Mr. and Mrs. George Burd, living north of town, who have been down for the last six or eight weeks with typhoid fever, are at present on a fair way to recovery.

Michael Harper, living at M. M. Musser's, and who has been confined to the house nearly all winter by sickness has recovered sufficiently to take an occasional out door walk. He took in the convention one day last week.

Mrs. J. G. Kurtz, Milton, Pa., Mrs. L. D. Kurtz, Mifflinburg, Pa., and Mrs. Henry Foster, Harrisburg, Pa., are here visiting their father, Mr. Emanuel Ettinger and other near relatives and friends.

Rev. Deitzler's protracted meeting is still in progress and judging by the attendance and the interest shown by the members and people generally the meeting will continue for a week or two longer. The house was crowded at last Sunday evening's services.

The news just reached us that Mrs. John S. Homan, residing below town, broke one of her limbs. As to how, when and where this accident happened we have not yet learned.

Chas. H. Stover, our tannery hill confectioner, starts out to day (Thursday) with a full line of cigars, and cut smoking and chewing tobacco. He is agent for a first-class eastern wholesale house. There is lots of business snap in Charley and he is bound to make things go. ANOTHER.

COBURN.

A great many of our citizens attended court in Bellefonte last week as witnesses.

Only about one more week until election time and we have as yet heard of no candidates who are anxious to be elected to the township offices. We should have a justice residing at Coburn and trust some one will be elected who is competent to fill the office.

Testimony was taken on Tuesday last at Kleckner's hotel in the suit for divorce of Thos. Keen.

On Tuesday evening last the Ladies' Mite Society of the Lutheran congregation met at the home of Mrs. Seriff. The congregation is the youngest at Coburn, but we understand it is in a flourishing condition and their only drawback is the want of a church of their own, which we hope they will be able to erect ere long.

The rains of the past few days have raised the streams considerable and catching fish is now the order of the day.

Davy Billmyer came up from Ingleby the other day all smiles and happiness. When asked what was up he replied, "Oh, it is twins this time and boys at that." VALE.

GREEN BRIAR.

The recent rains have raised the waters of Penns Creek with slight damage along its course.

Most of our young folks attended the two concerts at Aaronsburg and were highly pleased, especially with "Family Squalls" and "The Fortune Teller."

The icy condition of the roads caused the teamsters in Mr. Sober's employ to greatly damage the fences of G. W. Stover and the question now is who is to pay for the repairs.

Reuben Bracht, who had intended to go to Illinois has changed his mind and concluded to stay with us another year. Glad to haye you stay, Reuben.

Saml. Brumgard was a visitor at Joel Herb's. We learn that Mr. Brumgard's object was to purchase several horses for his farm in Brushyalley and also secure a hired man for the coming summer. Come again, this neighborhood is a good spot for buying horses.

Mr. Crosswite, the excellent saddler from Bellefonte, is again working at his trade in this place.

Daniel Garey has come to the conclusion that he can fill the office of constable and still run his blacksmithshop and will therefor keep his shop open for custom the coming year.

Daniel Gentzel has just returned from his trip with a fine lot of horses which he will offer for sale.

Jared Snook, living on the Sankey farm, intends to move to the Gephart farm above Millheim. Sorry to see you go but wish you success.
ZITZKA.

PENN HALL.

The coon scrape is settled and nobody hurt.

Mr. Benjamin Tyson, from Sugar Valley, who is employed by J. B. Fisher, as milkman, moved his family to this place last week.

Messrs. J. C. Condo and J. W. Bartges were attending court last week. Mr. Condo says he took in the whole business and thinks he can now run a law office too. Wonder whether Jim will make Democratic or Republican stump speeches.

A. C. Fisher and David Sowers are out buying up cows. At that rate our town will be in need of a creamery before long.

We understand the kids had a party.

James Wert, the boss thresher, is at present thrashing for F. D. Hosterman.

Quite a number of our young folks were in attendance at the Aaronsburg concert last Saturday evening. Those attending during the week were Ella Fisher and Emma C. Heckman.

The debating society will meet on Friday evening. DENVER DAN.

—WHEN your children are threatened with croup or whooping-cough, beware how you lull them to sleep with cough syrups whose principal ingredients are morphia and opium. The natural effort of the lungs to expel the suffocating mucus is coughing. Dr. Kessler's Celebrated English Cough Medicine contains no morphia or opium in any form, and by its stimulating actions on the kidneys, bowels, and pores of the skin, more than any other remedy, assists Nature in breaking up and expelling the worst colds from the system. Money refunded to dissatisfied purchasers. Sold everywhere.

SPRING MILLS.

Mr. W. F. Smith, from Smithtown, was here on Tuesday. He was much taken with the creamery, where he spent a few hours with his old chum, Mr. Mallory.

Chas. P. Long still makes his regular visits to Nittany Valley. There seems to be some special attraction in that valley.

Jonathan Condo, from Nittany Valley, has rented Mr. Crawford's house with the intention of moving here in the spring and become a citizen of this place. He has connected himself with a large Boot & Shoe establishment of Philadelphia as traveling salesman.

Jerry Philips, Esq., of Philadelphia, spent a few days with his brother, P. D. Philips, last week.

Geo. A. Runk has returned from his western trip. His many friends are glad to take him by the hand and welcome him home. *

REBERSBURG.

On last Thursday Benjamin Smith moved from Centre Hall to Wolf's Store where he now occupies Mrs. Sallie Wolf's house.

Guiswite & Co. have for the present quit work on their saw mill. They have removed the old engine to make place for the new one which they will shortly receive.

Clark Gramley has lately purchased a large hand power printing press.

C. C. Lose has sold his store to John Harter, his former clerk. Mr. Harter is just the man to run a general merchandise store and we wish him the best of success.

On last Friday some of the scholars of Gramley's school paid back the visit of Wolf's scholars and presumably have received due credit.

Some of our capitalists talk of erecting a creamery in this immediate vicinity. Hope it is not empty talk for we want just such an enterprise here.

Another wedding is on the tapis. This time it will be our fur dealer. Well, that is what we looked for long ago, Ammon.

The members of the Lutheran church of this place contemplate erecting a new parsonage next summer on the same lot on which the Lutheran church stands. This will make a very convenient home for the pastor.

Next Saturday evening there will be a caucus meeting in the brick school house to nominate a ticket for township officers. SQUIBOB.

MARRIED.

On the 21st of Dec. 1886, at Madisonburg, by Rev. J. Dotterer, Mr. Elias Miller to Miss Amanda Grimes.

On the 23d, ult., at Rebersburg, by the same, Mr. J. W. Gramley, of Rebersburg, to Miss Jos. Sellers, of Logan Mills, Clinton Co., Pa.

Home Evidence

No other preparation has won success at home equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. In Lowell, Mass., where it is made, it is now, as it has been for years, the leading medicine for purifying the blood, and toning and strengthening the system. This "good name at home" is "a tower of strength abroad."

People of Lowell

It would require a volume to print all Lowell people have said in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Mr. Albert Estes, living at 28 East Pine Street, Lowell, for 15 years employed as boss carpenter by J. W. Bennett, president of the Erie Telephone Company, had a large running sore come on his leg, which troubled him a year, when he began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. The sore soon grew less in size, and in a short time disappeared.

Jos. Dunphy, 214 Central Street, Lowell, had swellings and lumps on his face and neck, which Hood's Sarsaparilla completely cured.

Praise Hood's Sarsaparilla

Mrs. C. W. Marriott, wife of the First Assistant Fire Engineer of Lowell, says that for 16 years she was troubled with stomach disorder and sick headache, which nothing relieved. The attacks came on every fortnight, when she was obliged to take her bed, and was unable to endure any noise. She took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after a time the attacks ceased entirely.

Many more might be given had we room. On the recommendation of people of Lowell, who know us, we ask you to try

Miscellaneous News.

Montana's Terrible Winter.

FORT SHAW, Mont., Feb. 2.—The snow is still falling. It is not possible yet to give definite information concerning the loss of cattle and sheep. Cowboys are attempting to round-up the stock and beat paths for them through the deep snow. Nothing has yet been heard from the relief party which is searching for the missing Choteau coach. It is reported that the Benton and Assinoboine coach is also lost.

Ex-Alderman O'Neil Convicted.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—After being out an hour and a quarter the jury on the trial of ex-Alderman O'Neil for bribery returned to the court room at 11:10 o'clock last night and rendered a verdict of guilty. This will be startling news to those who have based hopes of an acquittal on the testimony of the four new witnesses whom energetic counsel for O'Neil had discovered, and it is likely to give a hint to the bribe givers whose turn is coming that with every new conviction the accumulation of the chances against them increases, even if by law it ought not to.

ROBBING POST OFFICES.

Seven Men Break into One in Jersey City.

JERSEY CITY, Feb. 2.—The movement to secure a new post office for Jersey City received an unpleasant impetus last night. Half an hour before midnight seven masked men broke into the building, bound and gagged the watchman, and proceeded to blow open the safe. The post office is the old Dudley Gregory mansion, at the corner of Washington and Sussex streets. It has three entrances—one on Washington street, one on Sussex street for the employes and another in the rear for the reception of mail matter. John Springhand has been employed as a watchman for a number of years. He was standing in the rear of the distributing room after making his 11.25 round when he heard a crash on the Sussex street side. He rushed down stairs and was confronted by seven men, one of whom presented a pistol at his head. The door was standing open, and Springhand made a rush toward it and succeeded in getting into the street. Then he shouted for the police. The burglars followed him and dragged him back into the building, when they closed the doors, bound and gagged him, carried him up stairs and threw him into a corner. The safe and money order department is in the second story in the front of the building. The safe stands about six feet away from the window,

The men bored holes in the front doors of the safe, and, finding that they could not get them open, bored a hole in the back, into which they placed a charge of gunpowder and proceeded to blow it up. They did not succeed, and fearing that the noise might have attracted the attention of the police they made their escape. It is thought that they carried away considerable mail matter. The watchman was discovered about 4 o'clock, when one of the employes came on duty, and the matter was reported to the police, who have no clue to the burglars. It is supposed that the men were a part of a gang of New York thieves who have been robbing residences on Jersey City Heights. After the burglars escaped they undoubtedly crossed the ferry to New York. The gatekeeper at the Pennsylvania Railroad ferry at the foot of Montgomery street said that nine men, two of whom were tough-looking characters, came into the ferry house at about 12:30 this morning and took the Cortlandt street ferry for New York. It is thought that these may be the men. Inspector Brynes has been notified, and several of his best men are at work on the case.

Where They Use Stilts.

It is in the large plains called "Llandees," in Southwest France, that people use stilts as a matter of course. These plains are generally flooded, though not to a sufficient depth to enable people to get about in boats. The stilts are not held in the hands like those we are accustomed to see, but are firmly strapped to the side of the leg. The person wearing them carries a long pole to balance himself and to aid him in walking. This pole has usually a crosspiece at one end, so that by putting it at a slant on the ground behind him, the person on stilts can sit down on it and rest. It is a common occurrence in that country to see men and women sitting and knitting in this exalted position, while the sheep they are tending wander about the plain. They wear their stilts all day long, putting them on when they go out in the morning and taking them off only when they return home at night.
